

Everyone agrees
the brave men and women of our military have earned our respect and our support.

Everyone except Senator John McCain.

McCain Opposes the Bipartisan G.I. Bill of Rights

What's wrong with John McCain?

In 1944, Congress passed the G.I. Bill of Rights, a law that gave millions of American World War II veterans – including 839,000 Ohioans – the opportunity to buy a home and get a college education.

That historic legislation was a critically important step in helping veterans readjust to civilian life and strengthening America.

In 2007, veterans and a broad, bipartisan group of Senators and Representatives agreed that we should honor our military heroes and help meet their needs through a new G.I. Bill of Rights.

John McCain said “NO.” McCain publicly opposed and then voted AGAINST the new, bipartisan G.I. Bill of Rights.

Shame on you Senator John McCain!

He refused even modest improvements in medical care, education benefits and home ownership opportunities for millions of American veterans who have earned them through their courage in Iraq and Afghanistan.

He's benefited from great medical care in the past, but he doesn't want to share.
